

1950s migration (1957)

SPEAKER: I've met a lot of these people. I've lived in England. I've worked with Englishmen. In fact the chap I was just talking to before I met you, he's from England. One of the best film technicians in Australia. Just the sort of bloke we want to see more of. And now we've got a way to do just that.

Today throughout Australia committees are being formed to promote United Kingdom migration. These committees are the very basis of the Bring Out a Briton Campaign. What I want you to do in your town is to see that a committee is formed, and then to do everything you can to help it.
