

Building the Hume Dam (1951)

NARRATOR: The plan for the Hume Weir was a national model. The governments of the Commonwealth, New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia attacked the vital problem of water.

Work began in 1919 on the Weir for irrigation in the valley of the country's biggest river, the Murray.